Note and Comment.

Another of those fierce dust storms struck Monitor on Tuesday and when everybody was hoping for rain we only lost the soil from our crops and got the other fellows' dust instead. We sure do get some great weather in Alberta.

We were pleased to notice the Council took our advice and did a much needed improvement by laying a new sidewalk on the east side of main street. Oscar Johnson, general utility man, and a team of carpenters did in one day what had been a screaming necessity for years. We feel sure the ratepayers will never kick against the expense of public improvements of this nature, nor even for a modicum in beautifying its town. A little judicious tree-planting (properly protected) and annually persisted in would soon make Monitor an exception and an envious model to the crude prairie towns. Let visitors see that we take a pride in our town and its reputation and credit will be the dividend on the investment.

All over Canada the police are enforcing the food regulations and also the Anti-Lodging Law. There has been great improvement on the streets of most of the cities since this law was passed and a few fines of $100 and some of imprisonment have had a wholesome effect.

A word of warning to all who might reasonably be suspected of coming under Class 1. On another page will be found a public notice setting out all the necessary documents every such probable person must carry to save himself from being arrested and treated as a deserter.

REAL REASON FOR GERMANY'S BIG DRIVE ON THE WESTERN FRONT

THEIR EASTERN GAINS PROVE UNSUBSTANTIAL

Without a Future Upon the Sea Which Has Been the Cherished Hope Of the Enemy, Their Victory In the East is Only an Illusion

Germany's insistent drive on the western front betrays a dissatisfaction with what she has accomplished in the east. If her "triumphs" in Russia were as substantial as the kaiser in his vainglorious proclamations has tried to make out, Field Marshal von Hindenburg would not be hurrying his troops in France to certain destruction by scores and hundreds of thousands. The truth is that, serious as the German inroads upon Russia admittedly are, they do not signify the fulfilment of her ambition for political and economic dominion.

No matter how deeply she penetrates beyond the Russian border, she cannot realize her scheme of imperial expansion if her enemies hold the seas. She is still a beleaguered nation, though the iron ring of her adversaries has been broken in the east. She has no ocean commerce, her colonies are gone, her fighting ships are bottled up at Wilhelmshaven and Kiel.

As long ago as 1898 the kaiser said: "Our future lies upon the water." But, except for the Baltic and Black sea—and the wider activities of her submarines—Germany is shut off from the water. Her greedy plans for the acquisition of territory beyond the oceans have been checked. She has no longer any foothold in Asia or Africa, and South America, on which she formerly cast an envious eye, has risen against her. She cannot permanently content herself with exploiting the border provinces of Russia. Even if she is enabled, through the downfall of the allied line of power, to build a great fleet on the Black sea she will be confronted with the problem of getting it through the Dardanelles and into successful operation outside.

Thus the situation always comes back to the western front and the necessity, from Germany's point of view, for destroying the allied line of blood and steel that foils her there. Her Mittel Europa plan depends for its value on her ability to renew her business connections with the overseas world. She has been willing to relinquish, if need be, her lauded gains in the east in exchange for permission to work her will on the road to India. But this has implied a return to the maritime facilities she enjoyed before the war. These the allies are in no mood to grant. They rule the oceans and so retain a vital advantage against her. And they will continue to do so unless she breaks down and shatters their military and naval power in the west.

With these simple facts in mind, the vicious energy of her present campaign is easily understood. She confesses with every fresh sacrifice of her man-power in Picardy the insubstantial character of what she has won on her eastern frontiers. So long as the gallant armies of the allies in Belgium and France—together with the ships of the entente—are able to hold her back, the imperial future she has decreed for herself is impossible of attainment. She must crush her enemies where they have deliberately chosen to meet her supreme challenge—where today they oppose her with the great mass of their troops and war craft, and where they are systematically conserving their man-power at the expense of hers.

The German drive in the west for these reasons takes on a savage fury unknown heretofore even in the most fearful of wars. But the line and the resolution of the allies are unbroken, and Petain's grim words still thrill in the breast of every defender of the world's freedom: "They shall not pass!" — From the Providence Journal.

The Right Age

The young man claimed to have conscientious scruples. "In the year 1905," he said, "I was born again." "In that case," said the officer quietly, "have you any objection to joining the Boy Scouts?" — Boston Transcript.

Saskatchewan and Destruction of Game

Objection to Slaughtering of Game as a War Measure

Respecting the more generous use of our game for the purpose of eking out our meat supply during war times, I might say that outside of the Indian population there is very little hunting of big game or even feathered game in Saskatchewan for the exclusive purpose of supplementing our meat supply, the sport being a primary consideration and the meat thus secured being quite secondary. During the past number of years, in order to provide against the reduction of our wild life, we have been legislating in the direction of greater and greater restrictions in the annual fall hunt engaged in by our Nimrods. Last season the game act was again amended so as to conform with the migratory bird treaty between Great Britain and the United States.

While a game act is probably one of the most transient pieces of legislation we have, still we feel we have got the foundation of it just where we desire after twelve years of long and arduous work. In view of this, it would be with some reluctance that the people would consider the turning of our game into a commercial article for the purpose of barter and sale.

If I might make a suggestion, I am of the opinion that the prohibition as a war measure of the slaughter of young lambs and calves would conserve and increase our meat supply in a far more practical manner than any attempt at commercializing our game supplies could possibly accomplish.—Letter from Hon. W. R. Motherwell, Minister of Agriculture, Saskatchewan.

Peace Treaties of No Value

German Brutality Shows That There Is No Use in Considering Negotiations

H. P. Davidson, chairman of the American Red Cross war council, is in London after a tour of inspection of Red Cross work in the allied countries of Europe and will return to the United States almost immediately to superintend the second Red Cross drive to raise another $100,000,000 in a single week.

A correspondent asked him what had most impressed him during the trip and Mr. Davidson replied that he had been most impressed by the apparent result of the Brest-Litovsk treaty, which, together with the treaty of Bucharest, had eliminated from the minds of the allied peoples in Europe any question of a peace by negotiation. He said: "I have long ago heard talk about Alsace-Lorraine and Belgium or of indemnity. There is just one cry and that is, 'This world will not be safe until military power of Germany is crushed.' The same conviction is held in Switzerland, Holland and other small neutral countries, for it is now demonstrated as never before that the only way Germany is indeed a scrap of paper and there is no security of life and property so long as she possesses her military power."

Shoot Him Back

No Place Now in This Country for Busts of Prussian War Lords

With a rope around his neck, the statue of Frederick the great was lifted from its pedestal before the war college at Washington, hoisted into the air, lowered onto a truck and carted away.

It now reposes in the cellar of the war college building. The statue was presented to this country by Kaiser Wilhelm as "a lasting pledge for the continuation of friendly relations between Germany and America."

That was in 1904. There is no place now in this country for the busts of Prussian war lords given to us as "lasting pledges." The statue of Frederick was the symbol of militarism and German culture.

We have only one suggestion to offer to our government in this connection. Take Frederick out of the cellar, melt him into bullets and shoot him back home.—Port Huron Times-Herald.

Frozen By Pressure

The Ocean at a Depth of 34 Miles Turns to Ice

The belief seems to be widely held that at a certain depth an iron ship or any iron object will remain suspended, floating above and never reaching the bottom. Those who believe this evidently confuse weight and pressure. A body sinks in a fluid when its weight is greater than the fluid which it displaces, which evidently has the same volume as the body.

For this reason, any heavy body will go to the bottom in water, since water is nearly incompressible.

An engineer of high repute recently took exception to this statement, asserting that at a depth of 34 miles water would be as dense as cast-iron and therefore cast-iron would float at that depth. As a matter of fact, water at such depths is frozen solid in the dense form of ice, frozen by the pressure of the water above it.—Tit-Bits.

What Germany Has Lost

War, From Every Angle, Proves a Losing Game for Germany

She has lost her high seas commerce.

She has, therefore, lost her foreign trade.

She has lost her last colony, with the successful conclusion of the East African campaign.

She has lost the respect and confidence of most of the nations.

She has lost her former leadership in many realms.

She has lost her monopoly of the dye trade.

She has lost many of her patent rights, that were once a source of great wealth.

She has lost her supply sources of many raw materials that are essential to her industrial life.

She has lost millions of her sons.

She has lost her soul.

Russia a Doubtful Asset to Germany

Taking Hundreds of Thousands of Troops and Police to Organize and Control It

The loss of Russia to the allies is a doubtful asset to Germany; until she can organize it for industrial and agricultural purposes it is a huge liability, taking hundreds of thousands of troops and police to organize and control it. On the other hand, Russia's place has been taken by the immensely wealthy and powerful democracy of the United States, whose influence on the western front is already being felt.

It is for us now to have patience; to hold fast to the faith that is within us; for the day is rapidly approaching when we will have the absolute mastery of the air, and then the end of Germany is in sight. With her artillery blundered, her troops raked with the machine gun fire of our squadrons of the air, her munition works splintered, her ammunition dumps and railways blown up, her towns devastated by avalanches of bombs, the war will be brought home to the German people. They will then and only then, realize what war is, and what invasion means, and they are not made of the stuff that can "lick it."

It is for us to back up our faith and our ideals, for democracy is now on trial. Is it to be "Right is Might" or "Might is Right?"

Concluding an arraignment of Germany because of her treatment of prisoners of war, the London Daily Telegraph writes: It is not only that the Germans deliberately frustrate every obligation into which they enter, though that is bad enough. But what really appals the conscience of humanity is the innate beastliness, the atrocious and fiendish cruelty of the men with whom we are struggling in this war. The historian of the future will be puzzled to explain how this German race, capable of such action, could ever have been considered a part of civilized Europe. We ourselves can hardly understand the phenomenon, we can only note it as one of the paradoxes of history. In this combat of ours, and in this solemn crisis of our fate, we are compelled to say that no truce or peace is possible with this Teutonic monster—the monstrous machine which commits these outrages.

The German character as we know it is due partly to an innate brutality of the race which has always been in evidence, though for diplomatic reasons sometimes carefully concealed; and partly to definite teaching on the part of their philosophers and historians, who have confirmed and fortified the original Teutonic instincts. For what is it that these high priests of Kultur have taught their countrymen? The historians have devoted all their efforts to proving that the German race is superior to all others, that the philosophers have lent the weight of their erudition to prove that power means success, and that right is to be interpreted only in terms of might.

German civilization has been wholly based on materialistic foundations, and it is one of the most pernicious lessons of history that when a people is solely occupied with aims of crass materialism, all the graces of the spirit, all the tendencies toward mercy and kindness, and all our good-fellowship, are withered and disappear. The report of Mr. Justice Younger's committee is only one proof added to countless others that in dealing with our enemy we must not assume that he is guided by motives in any sense similar to our own. As President Wilson has well said, the only way to deal with him is by "force, the utmost force," in order that a deadly poison may be eradicated from Europe, and a future prepared more consonant with civilized and humanitarian ends.

"The Scots are proverbially cautious," she answered carelessly. But Foster thought he saw a gleam of interest in her eyes. "I suppose somebody has been bothering you with questions?"

"Yes, as I'm of a retiring character, it annoys me. Besides, I really think it's quite unjustified. Do I look dangerous?"

"No," she said with a twinkle, "if you did, I shouldn't have ventured to speak to you. On the contrary, you have a candid air that ought to be a little distrust. Of course, I don't know if it's deceptive."

"You have to know people for some time before you can really judge, but, on the whole, I imagine I'm harmless," Foster replied. "That's what makes it galling. If I had, for example, a part in some dark plot, I couldn't resent being watched. As it happens, I merely want to get as much innocent pleasure as possible out of a holiday, and feel vexed when people won't let me."

The girl gave him a quick, searching look, and then said carelessly, "One can sympathize with you; it is annoying to be watched. But, after all, Edinburgh's rather dull just now and the cold winds are trying to people not used to them."

"Is this a hint that I ought to go away?"

"Do you take hints?" she asked with a smile. "Somehow I imagine you're a rather obstinate person. I suppose you took the packet to Newcastle?"

"I did," Foster admitted in an apologetic voice. "You see, I promised to deliver the thing."

"And, of course, you kept your word. Well, that was very nice of you, but I wouldn't make any rash promises while you stay in this country. So, times they lead one into difficulties. But I must go."

She left him with a friendly smile, and he sat again in a thoughtful mood. It looked as if she had had an object in talking to him, and she had learned that he had gone to Newcastle and had since been watched. He gathered that she thought the things had some connection, though her remarks were guarded. Then she had given him another hint, which he meant to act upon.

Leaving the tea room, he walked for a short distance and then stopped on the pavement in Princess street and looked about. It was dark, but a biting wind had cleared the air. At one end of the imposing street a confused glimmer marked the neighborhood of the Caltonian station, and when one looked the other way a long row of lights ran on, and then curving round and rising sharply, ended in a cluster of twinkling points high against the sky. The dark, blurred mass they gathered round was the Castle Rock, and below it the tall spire of the Scott monument was faintly etched against the shadowy hollow where the gardens sloped away.

Now he had resolved to leave the city, Foster felt its charm and half-resented being, in a manner, forced to go, but he walked on, musing on the way women had recently meddled with his affairs. To begin with, Carmen had given him the troublesome packet, then it was largely for Alice Featherstone's sake he had embarked on a fresh adventure, and now the girl in the tea room had warned him to leave town. It was a privilege to help Alice, but the others' interference was, so to speak, superfluous. A man could devote himself to pleasing one woman, but three women were too many.

After a few minutes he stopped and looked into a shop window as a man passed a neighboring lamp. It was dark and the fellow was moving slowly, although Foster did not think he had seen him yet. He would know very soon and for a moment or two he felt his heart beat, but when he looked round Daly had passed. Foster followed and saw him enter the tea room. This was disturbing, although Foster remembered that he had told nobody he was going there. He decided to leave Edinburgh as soon as he could next morning and bought a map of southern Scotland on his way back to the hotel.

After dinner, he sat down in the smoking room near a man he had once or twice spoken to. The latter was a red-faced, keen-eyed old fellow, who looked like a small country laird.

"I've come over to see Scotland, and have been long enough in the capital," he said. "After all, you can't judge a country by its towns. What would you advise?"

"It depends upon what ye want to see," the man replied.

"I think I'd like the moors and hills. I got enough of industrial activity in Ontario and would sooner hear the grouse and the black cock than shipyard hammers. Then I'd prefer to take my time and go on foot."

His companion nodded approval. "Ye have sense. Are ye a good walker?"

"I have walked three hundred miles through pretty rough country and dragged my belongings on a hand sledge."

"Then I think I can tell ye how to see rugged Scotland, for the country has two different sides. Ye can take your choice, but ye cannot see both at once. I could send ye by main roads, where the tourists' motors run, to the show places, where ye would stay at smart hotels with Swiss and London waiters, and learn as much of Scottish character as ye would in Lucerne or the Strand."

"I don't think that is quite what I want. Besides, I haven't much time and would sooner keep to the south."

"Then ye'll take the high ground and go by tracks the most troopers rode, winding on the waters and among the fells, where there's only couthouse clachans and lonely farm-towns. Ye'll see there why the old Scottish stock grows firm and fierce, and the bit, bleak country breeds men who like it respected across the world. Man, if I had not rheumatism and some fustian business here, we would take the moors and I would show ye."

"You don't seem to like the smart hotels," Foster remarked, half-attentive.

CUT FINE FOR CIGARETTES - CUT COARSE FOR PIPE

"I do not like the folk they harbor. The dusty trippers in leather coats and goggles ye meet at McRorie and Jedburgh are an affront to an old Scottish town. But a man on foot, in clothes that match the ling and the gray heath, gives a human touch to the scene, whether ye meet him by a wind-ruffled lochan or on the broad moor. Ye ken he has come slowly through the quiet hills, for the love of what he sees. But ye will not understand an old man's having!"

"I think I do," said Foster. "In another country I've taken the lone trail. But I have a map here, and don't care much where I go, so long as it's somewhere south. Suppose you mark me out a route towards Liddesdale?"

The man did so, and jotted down a few marginal notes.

"I'm sending ye by the old drove roads," he explained. "Sometimes ye'll find them plain enough but often they're rough green tracks, and nobody can tell ye when they were made. The most troopers wore them deeper when they rode with the spear and steelcap to Solway sands. Afterwards came the drovers with their flocks and herds, the smugglers' pack-horse trains, and messengers to Prince Charlie's friends from Louis of France. That's why the old road runs across the fell, while the turnpike keeps the valley. If ye follow my directions, ye'll maybe find the link between industrial Scotland and the stormy past; it's in the couthouse and clachan the race is bred that made and keeps alive Glasgow and Dundee."

CUTICURA HEALS ITCHING ECZEMA

So Bad Could Not Sleep. Red With Water Blisters and Burning.

"I had eczema so bad I could not sleep. It first started on my arm, then I had it on my body so that I could hardly wear my clothes, and I had to stay in bed. My flesh was dark red with water blisters, and burning and itching."

"Everything I tried seemed to make me worse, and I had the trouble for nearly two years. I read about Cuticura Soap and Ointment, and I got them. They did me good right away, and now I am entirely healed."

(Signed) Mrs. Peter McInnes, French River, Ont., April 10, 1917.

Why you should look for this Trade-mark on your Shoes

A TRADE-MARK is a manufacturers' signature. If a firm makes an article they are prepared to stand behind—they stamp it with their trade-mark. It is put on their goods so you may identify them. It stands to reason, therefore, that it is safer for the public to always buy "known" and "trade-marked" shoes rather than "anonymous" shoes.

[Each working day of the year, the A. H. M. trade-mark is stamped on the soles of thousands of pairs of shoes for men, women and children, because we want you to know our shoes when you see them—because we are making a sincere effort to produce good values in footwear—because we believe you will find our shoes satisfactory—and buy them again and again.

Ames Holden McCready are Canada's largest makers of shoes. A.H.M. footwear is sold by thousands of dealers in every part of Canada—and by the leading merchants in almost every town.

We make such a large proportion of the boots and shoes that the Canadian people wear that you are probably wearing A. H. M. shoes now. However, the next time you buy shoes, to make sure, look for this trade-mark on the sole.

We make many grades and styles of footwear, but no matter what price you pay for them you will find them excellent value for the money. You will find it profitable and satisfactory in future to always make this trade-mark your guide in buying footwear for yourself and your family.

The big Red Cross sports today promise to be a record. A big programme of events is out and with the hot dry weather farmers will be glad of an excuse to get away from their farms for one day and revel in the old English sports for sweet charity's sake.

The subject of the address given by Mrs. Haines in the Big Hall on Sunday evening, June 2nd, was "The call of Jesus our King to serve Him." A few of the beautiful thoughts expressed were that we were all called to serve Christ our King. That by serving Him we are laying up treasures in heaven. The call of "your king and country needs you" has reached many a life and a grand response has been made. Angels would count it an honor to have the privilege of doing the work that we are called to do.

U.F.A. Drive.—Special meetings for a U.F.A. membership campaign will be held on Monday next at Bideford and on Tuesday at Monitor at 8 p.m. The speakers will include T. F. Caradon, C. F. Brown and Mrs. Dowler as well as local officials. We understand that Mr. P. Moth has kindly donated the Big Hall for the Monitor meeting.

A nasty runaway affair took place on Tuesday evening. A team with a heavily laden wagon took fright apparently at some paper that was whirled in the dust storm. When they bolted they turned square off over the footwalk and ploughed thro the narrow opening by the Post Office (incidentally smashing up his Majesty's steel-clad mail van) and down the back lane where they canoned into and broke the leg of a valuable horse. At the foot of the lane a deep gully was too much for the waggon and the tongue plunged yards deep into the road bed. The horses with the doubletrees on their heels took the road past the elevators and then headed for the open prairie with a couple of motor cars in pursuit. One man had a close shave of being crushed on the Post Office corner.

Mrs. Haynes has just received word from her brother, Rev. J. R. Earl, missionary in West China, of him having a wonderful deliverance from the hands of fierce bands of robbers. Twice on his way to conference at Chungking and also on his return to Kiating he was personally attacked, but was delivered from them and no harm came to either himself or the men who were with him. Mr. Earl says his only help was in prayer.

An Informal Visit

A member of the American Lafayette squadron had to make a precipitate descent and was fortunate enough to come down at a British aerodrome behind the lines, not, however, without mixing up things a bit.

After rescuing himself from the tangle of wires he limped slowly up to a "brass hat."

"Are you the big noise of this joint?" he asked.

"I am the commanding officer, if that has anything to do with it," was the reply.

"Well," said the American, "I just looked in to tell you I have spread the petrol tank on your grass plot."

Where the Passenger Was When He Wasn't

A well-known provincial paper in England makes itself responsible for the following story:

The traincar was hopelessly overcrowded, and several people, who had achieved the upper deck, were transgressing all regulations by standing.

"Now, then," called out the girl conductor with emphasis, "you can't stand on top."

"Well," said one literalist, smiling blandly as he peered down the steps "we are standing, whether we can or not."

The girl answered nothing, but promptly pressed a button. The car jumped forward, and the literalist involuntarily took a seat on the floor.

"There," said the girl, apparently in complete good humor, quoting the barrister in a famous play, "you think you can, but you can't."—Christian Science Monitor.

Sensible Talk on Water

Have the Cows in Comfortable Quarters Where They Can Drink Whenever They Want to

Professor Fropps at the last Nebraska dairymen's convention, stated in a few words some very important truths on the question of supplying the cows in winter time with what water they need and in a way that they will drink it. He said:

"I do not know of anything that will help the flow of milk in the winter to much as to have something to take the chill off the water and to have the cows in comfortable quarters where they can drink whenever they want to. Cows like to be able to drink occasionally and they will not go out in the cold to drink until they are driven to it. I do not know of anything that would help out so much the production of milk as guarding that little point about the kind of water the cows have and where they have to go for it."

In these days of high-priced feed many of us will spend hundreds of dollars on the feed side and lose hundreds of dollars maybe on the water side. What a maysided question this handling of dairy cows is.

A Boon for the Bilious.—The liver is a very sensitive organ and easily deranged. When this occurs there is undue secretion of bile and the acid liquid flows into the stomach and sours it. Eat More Vegetables

There are plenty of potatoes, carrots, turnips and onions in Canada from last year. "Eat them up," says the Canada food board. "Do not waste one of them. Eating vegetables will save wheat. It is wheat that they want over there."

Complete in itself, Mother Graves' Worm Extremator does not require the assistance of any other medicine to make it effective. It does not fail to do its work.

How to Make Potato Butter

Potato butter is recommended by the British ministry of food as a cheap substitute for butter, being made in England at a cost of less than 10 cents per pound, as follows:

"Peel the potatoes and boil until they fall to pieces and become floury. Then rub through a fine sieve into a warmed basin 14 ounces of potatoes and add 2 ounces of butter or margarine and 1 teaspoonful of salt. Stir until smooth and then mold into rolls and keep in a cool place. To make the appearance approvable use butter coloring, and if intended to keep beyond a few days, a butter preservative should be added."

Veregin Closes Deal for 10,000 Acres of Prairie Land

Peter Veregin, leader of the Doukhobor colonies in Western Canada, has just consummated a deal for 10,000 acres of prairie land near Killmore, Sask. The payments for this land extend over a period of 10 years and Mr. Veregin has given his pledge that he will not in any case return to Russia within that period of time.

"This proves," he said, "that our people are not planning on returning to Russia. Our religion prohibits us from fighting, but we are doing everything in our power to aid the war from a standpoint of production. We have taken no oath of fealty to the British crown; our beliefs forbid us to swear allegiance to any king but Jesus Christ."

Tired out after sewing!

What a common experience, whether the work is done by hand or machine. It is not so much on account of the muscular exertion as because of the strain on the eyes.

You feel tired all over, because the nerves are exhausted. The optic nerve, which controls sight, is extremely sensitive, and when in constant use consumes nerve force at a tremendous rate. If the nervous system is not in good, healthy condition this strain is more than you can stand, and you have headaches, and feel all tired out.

Many people feel the same way after a shopping tour, from riding on a train, or doing any work which requires the continued use and focusing of the eyes. Many are wearing glasses when what they really need is a nerve restorative, such as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, to build up the exhausted nervous system.

By supplying to the tired, wornout nerves the elements from which new nerve force is created. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food reconstructs the wasted nerve cells. Headaches, dizzy spells, sleeplessness and tired feelings soon disappear, and you find yourself feeling better in every way.

It is worth your while to give this treatment a thorough trial, for the whole system is benefited, and the results are lasting.

BUSY BIDEFORD

RUNNALS v. O'SULLIVAN.

This case was a claim for some $3.00 by George Runnals for the keep of a horse during last winter whilst defendant John O'Sullivan was away from home. The defendant denied that any agreement was made for any charge and in defense counter-claimed for use of implements, and also for hire of horse which he alleged had been used in driving some ladies out of town. The trial was held yesterday at Coronation, and the judge adjourned the case till Oct. 24th for defendant to bring the ladies as witnesses.

RED CROSS v. RED TAPE. — A meeting was held in the school basement on Friday and there was a fair attendance. A vote of confidence was passed on the committee so that they might handle all work and moneys. It was suggested that every member should endeavour to bring in two new members. The fall auction sale was discussed and it was suggested that after the sale a social evening be held. It was strongly felt that red tape should be dispensed with when the Red Cross is concerned so that when ladies are attending a meeting they should not be asked to sit in the basement.

A NAVY DRIVE was held on Saturday and Sunday for the sailors, when most of the outlying farms were visited and a generous response was made for the brave Jack Tars who defend our shores. Mr. Stinson kindly donated his car for the day and upwards of 50 dollars was sent in as Bideford's contribution.

A Well-Wisher writes urging the advisability of building a large hall rather than a rest-room, and points out with a rare logic that if the school is too small for our concerts now how shall we manage when the town expands and our reputation receives its meed of appreciation.

B.W.J.B. writes that there is a young man in town with heart trouble. Well, Jack, the military medico would excuse you if that is so but Cupid is heartless in a case of the heart.

Well done, Busy Bideford. I understand that with her two elevators she has shipped some 10,000 more bushels of grain than Kierriemuir with its three elevators during the past year.

Watling's Bit o' Verse, with apologies to Bradshaw:—

Who said that Bideford was on the boom? We hope they're right, I'm sure. But there are several people between here and Kierriemuir who laugh at our vain boasting, and say, with a broad smile, if you cut out your back-biting we'll work with you all the while. This town for gossip takes the cake, I'm sure you'll all agree, and if they're leaving you alone, they're surely slandering me. Miss Alice is a favorite and for singing can't be beat, but as for listening to Dwight, well, let us go and eat. And Watling's singing was real punk, we knew he tried before, but neither he nor N.D.R. made fun behind the door. Of the others who were trying to do their very best, and a man not used to singing was put to quite a test. If you wish your town to go ahead and lead your neighboring towns, meet every body on the street with smiles instead of frowns. The more you cuss and swear and fuss the more you sure will find that the other fellow does the business while you are left behind.
